NEW YEAR SCOTTISH STYLE

UNDER THE FLIGHT PATH

Lauren Murada

SYDNEY is cited as being one of the best cities in the world to celebrate New Year's Eve, with hundreds of international artists choosing the harbour city to celebrate every year.

And it's these rumours of grandeur that have lured Scottish deep house duo 6th Borough Project away from the freezing temperatures of Edinburgh for their first Australian tour.

They'll be playing under the flight path at the Marrickville Bowling and Recreation Club for Mad Racket's New Year's Eve party and one half of the duo, Craig Smith, said he can't wait.

"I have a funny feeling that Sydney on New Year's Eve and a place full of Australians could be quite a party," he said.

"Might have a bit of a night on our hands, and that's coming from a hardened Scotsman."

The DJs will bring in 2012 ensuring every punter is dancing through their deep, soulful, funky version of deep house, also dipping into disco and warm tech.

MAD RACKET

It will cap off a killer year for the boys, with Smith and Graeme Clark (better known as The Revenge). They released their debut album One Night in the Borough in May and went on to tour the world.

Smith said he and Clark have began making tunes for their next record, and dancers may be lucky enough to here some new cuts.

"Often we play the demos of new stuff we're working on," he said.

"Lately we have seen other people playing it (tracks off One Night in the Borough) and getting a good reaction so maybe we should play our own thing too."

6th Borough Project is playing at Mad Racket's New Years Eve party at the Marrickville Bowling Club.
